BIG PRAYER MUSEUM™ | AMERICA'S 250TH ANNIVERSARY

My journey did not begin with a museum. It began with a prayer.

I am Joseph Renwick Randon, born and raised in Texas, shaped by a family of caretakers and the faith of my grandmother. She taught me that love is proven through service, compassion, perseverance, and prayer.

As an African American man, I know my life belongs to a greater American story. For more than four hundred years, African people endured slavery, separation, injustice, and loss. Yet the story did not end in suffering. It continued through faith, courage, family, culture, innovation, and hope.

As America commemorates its 250th Anniversary, we are called to remember the sacrifices that shaped this nation and the responsibility still before us. History should not divide us. It should make us better caretakers of one another.

More than twenty-five years ago, God placed a vision in my heart. Through prayer, that vision became Big Prayer. It expanded through SoundWater®, Geobody® Sense Fitness®, the Court of Life™, and now Big Prayer Museum™.

I consider myself not only the founder, but the custodian of this vision - entrusted to protect it, build it, and carry it forward for future generations.

Big Prayer Museum™ is intended as a living place of remembrance, education, reconciliation, participation, and hope. It welcomes people from every nation, culture, generation, and walk of life to remember the past with honesty, live the present with purpose, and build a future rooted in faith, compassion, responsibility, and unity.

The Court of Life reminds us that every positive thought, action, communication, and sincere prayer creates momentum. Momentum changes individuals. Individuals strengthen families. Families strengthen communities. Communities strengthen nations. Nations strengthen humanity.

This is my declaration: May we honor those who came before us, serve those beside us, and inspire those who will follow us. May we keep building Heaven on Earth through faith, hope, love, service, and prayer.

Together, let us remember. Together, let us pray.
Together, let us participate. Together, let us build.

The momentum continues. The prayer continues.
The responsibility continues. The opportunity continues.
